

Three-level scope: Coordinated Research Area approx. 43.6 km² (strategy and regional synergy), Overall Design Area approx. 11.4 km² (urban renewal at RDP depth), Key-Area Detailed Design Area approx. 368.4 ha (three archive stations). The levels are continuous: research explains why the belt exists, design turns judgments into recomputable land use and projects, key areas verify implementability.

Risk and compliance: full recalculation when official boundaries are released; control/redline/ownership/heritage gaps are listed as assumptions; archive facilities collect no personal trajectories; honors are human-final; no official approval or implementation commitment is claimed.

Spatial structure: one belt (Memory Spine) · three stations (Source/Transform/Scenario) · two wings (Zhongguancun factor record, Xiaoyue scenario record) · multiple points (name wall/Honor Yearbook/commit stele) · two networks (blue-green slow traffic and archive retrieval). Renewal uses archive-based units: anchors + spine stitching + low-disturbance micro-renewal.

13 conceptual renewal projects in three phases: Phase 1 spine stitching and archive anchors; Phase 2 test blocks and data platform; Phase 3 the two archive stations. Each item lists prerequisites, cost ranges, acceptance metrics and rollback triggers (safety/privacy/heritage/ecology/economy).

Three archive stations: Source · Zhongzhiyuan (full-stack innovation, model evaluation and standards hall); Transform · AI Origin Community (commercialization, commit stele and Honor Yearbook); Scenario · Dazhongsi (AI-native new business, four-quadrant pedestrian connection). All key-area content is directional concept design.
