

A CITY WHERE POSSIBLE FUTURES ARE REHEARSED IN PUBLIC

JINGZHANG CIVIC ORRERY

The future is not predicted for the city. It is calibrated with its people.

BOOKLET / 02

2126: An Ordinary Tuesday

Zhan Tianyou finds no giant screen and no identity gate. Routes remain plural, models disagree in public, maintenance errors enter the archive, and a service closes when its manual path fails. Engineering honour is the capacity to admit error and change.

Design Basis and Evidence Chain

The announcement and agent taskbook control scope; the site package controls machine-readable evidence; global cases support mechanism comparison only. Provisional geometry is not an official redline and triggers full recalculation when official data arrives.

Future Archaeology: 1909 / 2026 / 2050 / 2126

1909 honours measurement, standards, and revision; 2026 makes AI assumptions inspectable; 2050 builds shared capacity to compare distributional effects; 2126 preserves a century of decisions, failures, repair, and rights.

One civic meridian, three instrument houses, twelve future observatories, and two open wings. Every move is locatable, replaceable, and recalculable without pretending to be a road, parcel, or official redline.

Three-Level Scope

The strategic study frames industry and institutions; the overall design locates renewal, mobility, utilities, and blue-green systems; key areas host 100-day everyday validation. Results and failures return to the public archive.

Complete Topology, Not Statutory Zoning

Eight shared-edge conceptual polygons cover the provisional site using registered codes for research, education, housing, park, plaza, commerce, culture, and community service. They prove recalculability, not statutory control.

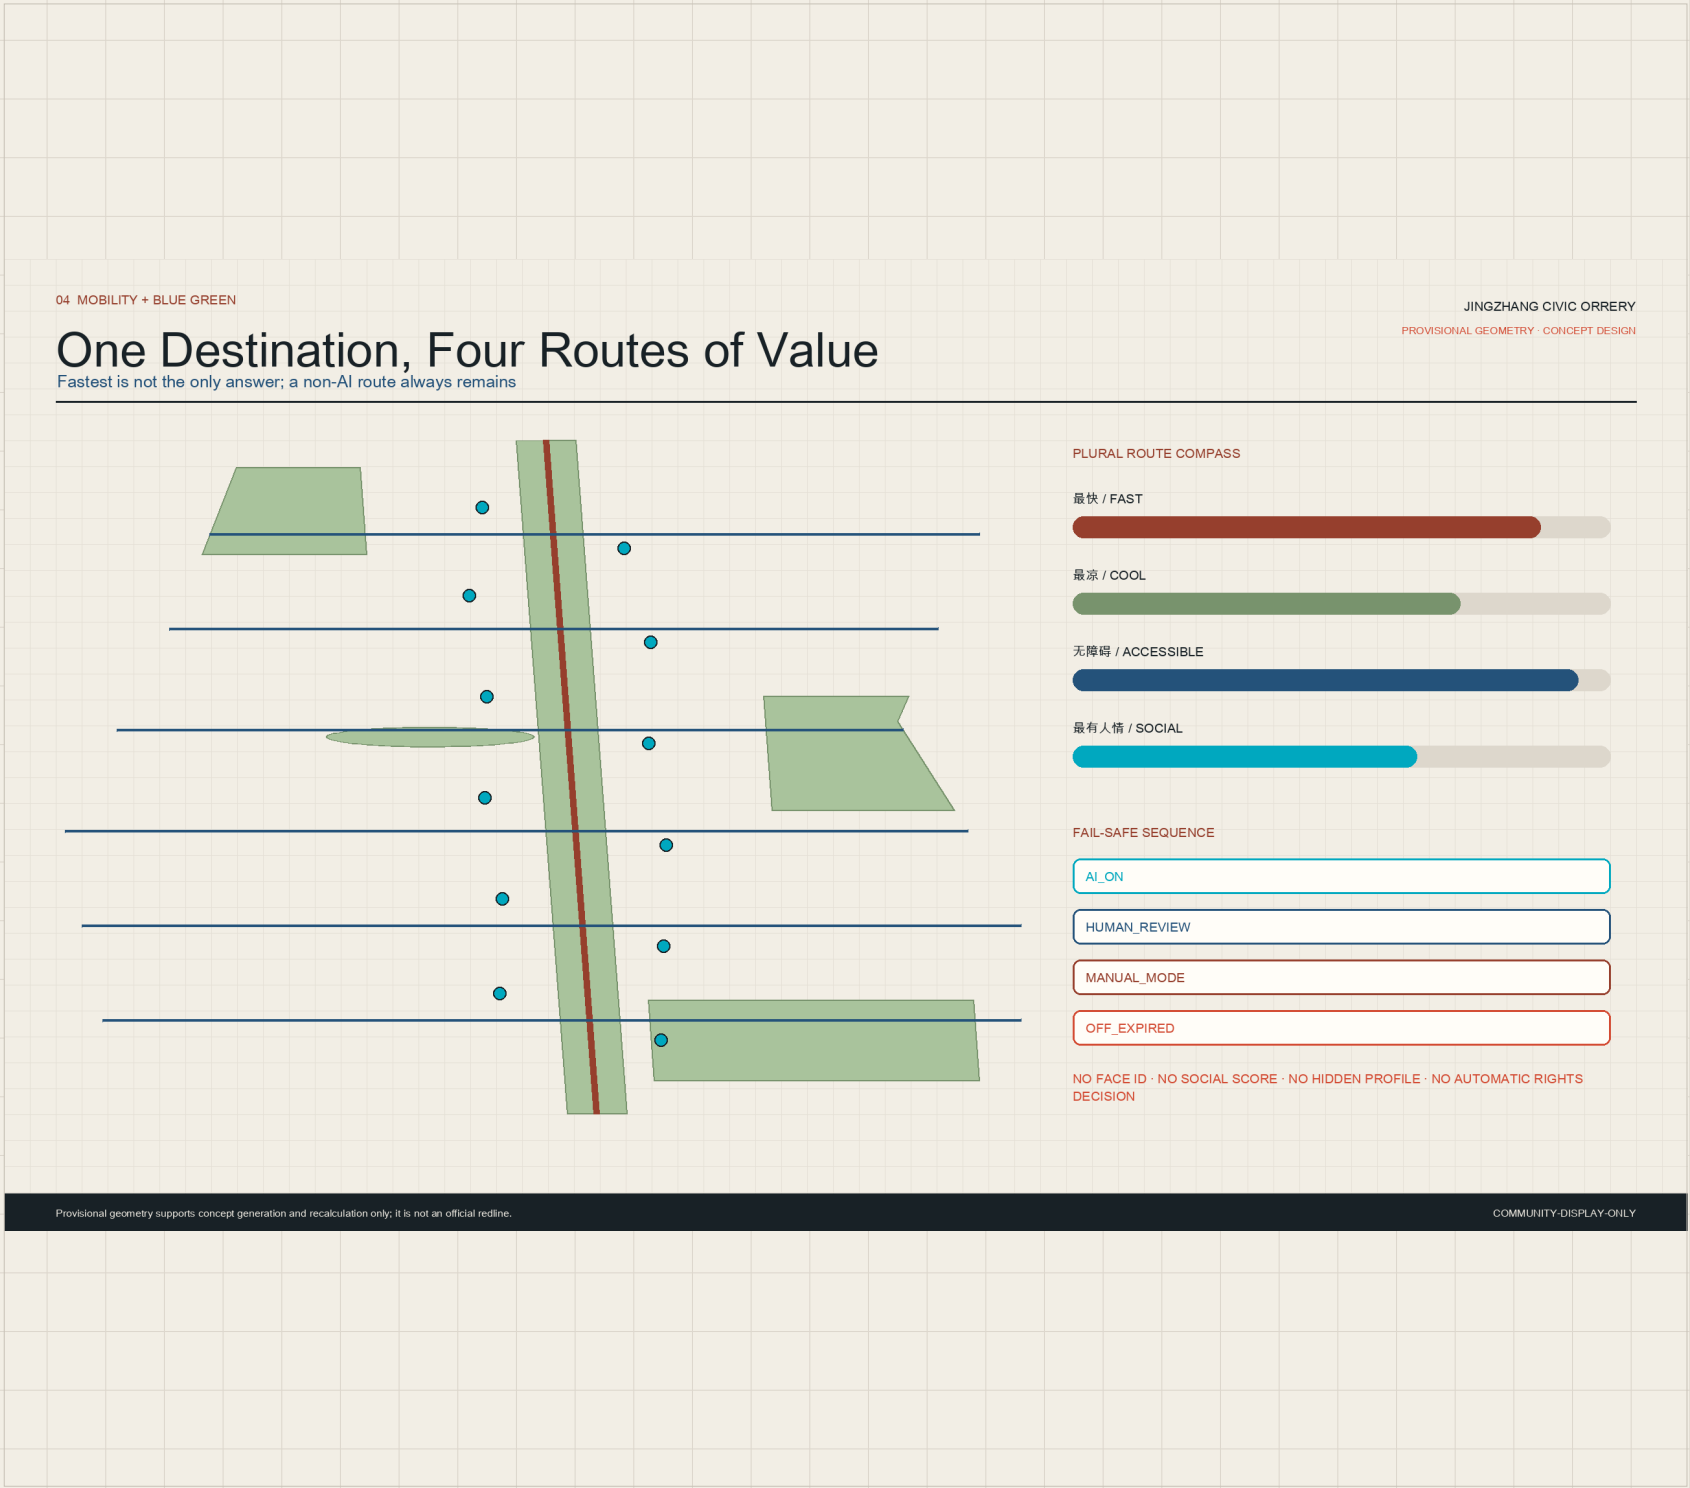

Plural Mobility and the First Segment

Fastest, coolest, most accessible, and most sociable routes stay visible together. The first segment outside each station reveals direction, shade, accessibility interruptions, night help, and staffed service. A non-AI path always remains.

Blue-Green and the No-Sensing Garden

A continuous canopy, Xiaoyuehe sensorium wetland, northern model grove, Dazhongsi everyday garden, and No-Sensing Garden work together. Only necessary non-personal environmental parameters are sensed; quiet space contains no sensors.

Buildings, Renewal Decisions, and Character

Ten conceptual footprints express public interfaces only, with no invented height, floors, total area, or FAR. Future parcel decisions pass four gates: heritage and safety, low-carbon reuse, public interface, and lifecycle operation.
